venience will incline them to cultivate friend-ly and mutual beneficial intercourse. The alayery agitation will cease, and each sec-

ears Union. But your leaders tell you that Transacco must wait for the Barder States. Virginia and Kentucky must not be left to struggle alone with the semmon enemy. Do you wish to aid Virginia and Kentucky? If you do, throw off the sharkles that will bind you to the triumphal car of the Northern neurper. Tennessee is now pressing like a nightmare upon Virginia and Kentucky. If Tennessee will awake to a consciousness of her power and a just appreciation of her rights, her duties, and her dignity as a sovereign, independent State, she will wait no longer for the action of the Border States. If Tennessee is prepared to acquiesce in the abolition and consolidation doctrines of the Northern Goveroment, she has a right to do so; but if she intends to maintain the institution of slavery, she must separate herself from its enemies, and strengthen the hands of its friends in the present crisis. Have we a common enemy? Why was the Peace Congress assembled? Why was the Congressional Committee of Thirty-three, and the Senate Committee of Thirteen appointed? Why have they all falled to settle the quarrel between the North and the South? Is it because the South demanded more than she was entitled to? or is it because there is an irreconcilable difference between the two sections?

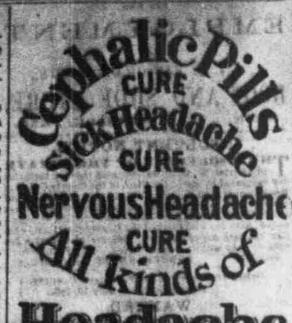

Whatever may be the cause, we must unite against our common enemy. We may think our friends have acted too hastily in severing the bond that bound us to our enemies; but they have an equal right to think that we have been too slow. For thirty yeers and more this sectional conflict has been maintained with constantly increasing violence. The South has remonstrated, year after year, against the injustice of the North, and have time after time, threatened to resist their destructive and insulting violations of the Constitution of the Union, until they have convinced the people of the North that they would endure any and every insuit they might choose to heap upon them, rather than secode from the Union.

In Septemberlast I was in Worcester, Mass., and witnessed the proceedings of a Black Repuplican Convention of that State. I listened to their resolutions and speeches in the Convention, and conversed freely with their leading editors and politidians, their merchants and cotton spinners, and they all agreed that the organization of the Republican party was a necessity; that it was demanded by the laws of God, the rights of man, and the ancient principles of the Government .-When I told them that the election of Mr. Lincoln would dissolve the Union, they smiled, and quietly replied that " if Mr. Lincoin should be elected, they guessed that the sun would continue to rise and set as usual." The Convention numbered over a thousand members-substantial men, who fairly represent she opinions and purposes of the majority of the people of the non-slaveholding States. They exhorted each other to more zealous effort in the grea! work of emancipation in which they were engaged. They pointed to their past defeats, and to the rapid increase of their party, which had always followed the temporar victories of the proslavery power. They had faith in their cause; ther believed that God was on their side, and even if they should suffer another defeat, they were confident of success in the next Presidential election. They succeeded. The Union is dissolved. Has Tennessees now no interests in the great questions which have divided the country? In times past she united with her sister Southern States in protecting against the aggressions of the North, and resolved to maintain ber constitutional rights, "at all hazards, and to the last extremity,

On the 6th day of November last, ap event. occurred which twenty years ago, was thought to be impossible. A President of the United States was elected under the forms of the Constitution, by a Northern sectional farty, organized upon the principles of hostilily to the Southern section, without receiving one electoral vote from any Southern State.

Thus the contest in the Union, which had lasted more than thirty years, was brought to a close in the triumpu of the anti-slavery party, and the consequent dissolution of the Union. In the midst of the revolution thus forced upon the South, the Legislature of Tennessee called upon the people to meet in Convention, to determine what action she ought to take in the premises. What was our we have nothing to complain of. Mr. Lincoln and received the same and they had so good an effect that was elected under the forms of the Constituted and received the same and they had so good an effect that tion, and we will wait until he commits some overtact; we will submit to the Black Republican sectional Government; we will stand by Mr. Lincoln, and justify him in enforcing the laws against our rebellious Southern brethren, who have seceded from the Union, and bid defiance to the constitutionally elected President. This, my Union friends, is the interpretation of your vote against the Convention. I knew you did not intend to make any such declaration. I am sure you did not intend to place Tennessee in this unnatural position. Now, the question is, what can you do to correct the Black Republican interpretation of your vote against the Convention? You can instruct your Governor to convene the Legislature to call a Convention, and you can elect delegates to that Convention, competent to consider and determine what position Tennessee shall take in the new political organization which must succeed the dissolution of the Union our fathers formed, and thus put an end to Black Republican rejoicing over the apparent submission of Tennessee to the insulting, tyrannical assumption of all the powers of the Government, which Tennessee has, in the most solemn manner, pledged herself to resist "at all hazards and to the last extremety-even to the severing of every tie that binds us to the Union." Will you Union men of Memphis, appeal to your Union friends of Tennessee to unite with you in redeeming the State from her palsied condition? You have the power; you have the majority in the State, and therefore to you I appeal to revoke the decree which binds you and me as citizens of Tennessee, to a government founded upon injustice and usurpation by our sectional energies, with the avowed purpose of crushing out the pro-slavery and State sovereignty principles of the South; a Government which could not, if it would, fail to deprive us of liberty, property, and honor, all that freemen hold sacred on earth; all that is worth living or dying for.
